Dear Josh,

I am still working on the cause of death of Griffith re. DNA. & cannot get understand the silence.

In trying to bring to a full stop my writing of "Old Endeavour" re contributions by medical scientists over age 65, I want to state in the introduction that you were the youngest to win the Nobel Prize for medicine or physiology. Have I got that right? Clearly you were a year younger than was Watson, but I'm not sure. Perhaps you can put me right on this subject.

Two quotations for you:

1) President Charles Eliot of Harvard: he said he was never lonely since he always had a fight on his hands.

2) Charles Lamb wrote that a Scotsman "lives in a twilight of duibiety"!

My pace-maker is going well – at the end of a lifetime of rheumatic fever sequelae.

My province of British Columbia is suing Big Tobacco for major health costs and I have recruited Sir Richard Doll, F.R.S. etc. at Oxford to pound the drum for us.

Warmest Bill
